Sami’s Wood Site owner Dirk Winter has listed the property, long used for staple Mammoth summer events such as Bluesapalooza, the Labor Day Arts Festival and heli-skiing in the Woods, for sale.

The ask: $5.9 million.

Winter purchased the property for $3.95 million in April, 2017.

As former property owner Dennis Hartman wrote in a letter which appeared in last week’s Sheet, he and partner Sam Walker reduced their sales price last year because they wished to accommodate Mr. Winter’s plans to preserve the site as an events venue.

At the time, Mr. Winter said his plan was to produce an annual Christmas Market at the site, similar to the event he produces each year in Cambria.

Mr. Winter told The Sheet two weeks ago that the Cambria Christmas Market grosses more than $3 million annually, Alas, Mammoth Christmas Market plans have been mixed in both 2017 and 2018.

And in an August 2 e-mail (one of several e-mails obtained by The Sheet via a public records request) sent by Winter to Town Manager Dan Holler (among others), Winter writes, “We have determined that this site cannot be economically utilized as an event site. We are actively investigating other development or sales options...”

Sami believes that Winter has acted in poor faith and violated the terms of his agreement with Mammoth Lakes Tourism (which handed him $300,000 toward site improvements as part of the initial deal).

Section II.A.1 of the Wood Site Agreement between Winter’s company (WML) and MLT states, “MLT agrees to provide the sum of $300,000 to WML [Winter]. The sum shall be used by WML to fund all or part of the improvements at the Woods pursuant to this Agreement and for no other purpose.”

But the $300,000 may have been used for another purpose - the down payment - the acquisition. The initial in his refreshingly blunt manner Wednesday, “The $300,000 went right into Sam Walker’s and Dennis Hartman’s pockets... and I should know!"

Winter, in an August 7 e-mail to Community Development Director Sandra Moberly, suggests otherwise. “With a sale or development options the unspent funds will be returned to MLT with interest.”

However, locally-based commercial real estate consultant Kevin Green clearly doesn’t believe the funds are unspent.

“He is full of crap,” wrote Green in an email to MLT’s Executive Director John Urdal and Board Chair Scott McGuire, “and the math on the acquisition says he has misappropriated the $300K.”

How does Green reach such a conclusion? Below is the August 2 e-mail he wrote in response to Winter’s announcement to abandon his event site plans.

“I have attached the Funding Agreement, Sales Comparable Sheet, and Deed of Trust for the Woods Site sale to WML. The property sold in April 2017 for $3,950,000, a week after MLT funded $300,000 into the escrow for the acquisition. The initial sale shows a down payment of $600,000 (of which half would have come from MLT), but the Deed of Trust shows a seller carry back note of $3,550,000, making it possible that only $400,000 was required to close the deal. Additional documentation is needed to understand where the other $200,000 went, but I’m guessing it was either: 1) Prepaid interest on seller carry back financing; 2) A sales commission paid to someone; or 3) Placed in a reserve account for actual improvements... I really have see WOODS, page 2

In subsequent e-mails, Green implored MLT as well as Town staff to request the Escrow Closing Statement, Purchase and Sale Agreement, Promissory Note, and Deed of Trust to determine where exactly the money ended up. Is it actually being held in a dedicated escrow account for improvements?

He was clearly surprised that MLT had apparently sent $300,000 “blindly” into an escrow without any sort of conception as to how the deal worked.

And he was also worried the Town may never see the money again. As he writes in an August 16 e-mail, “If the Note Holder (Walker/Hartman) forecloses on the property, both the $300,000 and use restriction will be wiped out as they are subordinate to the debt. This is the larger problem since Winter has little cash in the deal.”

The Sheet spoke to Sam Walker on Thursday. He still believes it is in the Town's best interest to purchase the property as an Event site, and as he pointed out, why not spend $4 million to acquire a site which hosts established events which quantifiably benefit the local economy and serve a wide cross-section of locals and visitors versus spending at least three times that amount on an ice rink (where you’re rolling the dice because there is no track record as to how it may perform)?

Walker could not recall the exact details of the Wood Site transaction, but did say there was no prepaid interest as Green hypothesized. He did say there was deferred interest.

Walker and Hartman are carrying the note. Walker guessed the interest rate at 5%. Which would equate to approximately $175,000 annually on a $3.55 million note.

Never mind the property taxes. Or the investment Winter has made to date. He has enlisted architects and planners and such to explore his Market idea. He didn’t just buy the $3.55 million note.

In other words, all he’s got to do is pay back the money and the agreement is null and void.

Without generating income from new events and hosting his own event, WML will likely default shortly on the note,” projects Green. Unless, of course, there’s a sale.

Dear Editor,

On behalf of all of our athletes and wounded warriors, Disabled Sports Eastern Sierra (DSES) would like to thank the community for coming together to install new pavers at June Lake Beach. The pavers, which faced an uncertain future earlier this summer, greatly improve the accessibility of the bathrooms at June Lake Beach. Combined with the Dick Noles Memorial Walkway that connects the parking lot to the water, they make June Lake the only truly accessible beach in the Eastern Sierra, opening up swimming and paddling opportunities for people with disabilities.

Specifically, we acknowledge the hard work of Randy Short, County Administrators Leslie Chapman and Tony Dublino, the Mono County Board of Supervisors, Forest Engineer Nora Gamino, and Inyo National Forest. Thank you for keeping June Lake accessible and enjoyable for all.

“Because we say so”

Dear Editor:

I’d like to make a few clarifying remarks related to the recent Sheet article “Smoogen V. Water World.”

First MCWD didn’t install the backflow preventer. Our landscape contractor did. As stated in the article, I am not opposed to the device, just the unnecessary inspections.

Secondly the State does not require a backflow device for residential landscape irrigation systems. I have a letter from the State Water Board that confirms this. The State does list specific hazards and defines the type of protection required. The only condition that mandates a backflow preventer for residential irrigation is when recycled water is used at the residence. The regulation says is that if you have a potential hazard that requires a backflow preventer then it must be inspected annually as a minimum. It doesn’t say that if you choose to install this device when no hazard exists, it must be inspected annually, i.e., no requirement for the device, no need for the inspection.

The State also says that potential hazards are to be dealt with on a case by case basis. Mammoth Community Water District made the requirement district wide without regard to the conditions that exist on the property. Examples given in MCWD’s Code, Section 3.34 that require a backflow preventer are “sewage treatment plants, sewage pumping stations, chemical manufacturing plants, hospitals, mortuaries and plating plants.” Period. No mention of residential landscaping. Initially I simply wanted to understand the logic behind this requirement. When the inspector couldn’t give a logical explanation I contacted the water district. When they couldn’t justify the requirement I turned to the State. I asked if a backflow preventer was required with my specific conditions. If yes, why wasn’t one required in L.A. County, San Diego County, or Ventura County where the same conditions exist? The answer, those counties apparently don’t see a hazard in residential landscape watering. When I discussed the State reply with MCWD the bear poop story was cited as the hazard that exists here in Mammoth. In my opinion the only rational reason supplied by the district for these annual inspections is, “It is required because we say so.” If the residents of Mammoth Lakes are not satisfied with this response, I encourage them to share their concerns with MCWD.

All hands on deck

Dear Editor:

Bob Woodson and John Eastman are right on when it comes to dealing with fires; put them out with all hands available.

As a young man I worked at Wood’s Lodge on Lake George for three summers in the late ’50s. Every week my co-worker and me made a dump trip to the open pit dump near the current trails community and the water district facilities in a Willys Jeep pickup truck.

On one trip, we saw a lot of smoke. As we came up to the turnout to the dump, we saw a fire, a big one. We were stopped by the Forest Service and told “We need you!” I remember saying we worked at Wood’s Lodge and need to get back. Forest Service: “That’s okay. I know the owner.”

We were given shovels and told to follow. The fire was eating up Jeffrey Pines with flaming cones dropping, for a seventeen year old, what an adventure. We worked with a truck crew pumping water and helped open hot spots with our shovels.

I noticed a lot of other men who were not Forest Service. As best I can remember they had been recruited from the vacationers heading to Mammoth Lakes off of 395.

The fire had started about 4 p.m. Around 9 p.m., we were taken to an area for a break, some sandwiches and new boots. Mine had almost burned off, I didn’t know it.

We had the fire under control by early morning and were taken to the Old Mammoth Tavern (current Footloose location), for a great breakfast.

Thank you’s were given, names and addresses taken. About 4 or 5 months later I received a check from the U.S. Dept of Agriculture/U.S. Forest Service for about $32.00 for my help.

LETTERS
Mammoth Lakes Town Council was short one member at Wednesday night’s meeting (John Wentworth). The agenda was also short. The reports were not.

Bob Steins from Southern California Edison (SCE) presented the utility’s wildfire mitigation plan. SCE will continue to replace wooden poles with composite ones and non-covered wires with covered wires. SCE has updated its weather monitoring practices with investment in new weather tracking technology (field officers will carry wind gauges). With a more robust understanding of the weather, SCE can more accurately, and efficiently proactively de-energize the grid or shut-off power.

SCE has had the program in place for a decade and Mammoth has not yet had its power shut-off.

Kirk Stapp admitted to violating the Brown Act and apologized. He shared a letter with both newspapers, stating his opinion on the development of The Parcel.

Neither newspaper published the letter, so Kirk, if a tree falls in the forest ...

The county’s radio infrastructure and system needs an overhaul. Nate Greenberg, Mono County IT director, brought the issue to the council. He began by citing that the county only has one-and-a-half full time employees to oversee the radio system. Though Greenberg did not say he wanted more employees.

Mammoth’s fire and police departments, and other first responders rely on radio to communicate in the field and with dispatch. A 2016 study of the county’s radio system found that, the law enforcement and fire department’s channels do not meet public safety standards.

The county has spent money mitigating these symptoms of deferred maintenance and poor planning. “It seems like we’re putting a whole bunch of Band-Aids on things,” Stapp said. He wanted to know what the first step was to a permanent fix.

Town of Mammoth Lakes and Mono County will have to enter into a Joint Powers Agreement (JPA). The JPA will coordinate a specific plan and funding, Town Manager Dan Holler called it “ESCOG (Eastern Sierra Council of Governments) on steroids.” It would include the Town of Mammoth Lakes, Mono County and all seven fire protection districts within the county.

Currently, the county spends $250,000 annually on its radio system. Greenberg estimates it’ll cost between $5-7 million dollars to modernize the system.

RUSH TO NEW REGULATIONS

By Benham

The California Fish and Game Commission has approved a petition for consideration that asks the Department of Fish and Wildlife (DFW) to change Rush Creek from a put-and-take fishery to a catch-and-release one.

The issue was discussed at Wednesday’s regular meeting of the Mono County Fish and Wildlife Commission held in June Lake.

The DFW will consider the petition on August 7 of next year. Then it will be discussed on October 9 at a regional meeting in Los Angeles and finally be up for adoption in December, 2019. June Lake resident Don Morton serves as a commissioner on the Mono County Fish and Wildlife Commission. He explained that if the bill passes in December of 2019, those regulations won’t come into effect until the fall of 2020. Therefore, it’s open season, within the law, at Rush Creek for two more years.

Morton cited the cost of a fishing license as one reason for a decrease in fishing licenses issued in the county. A one day sport fishing license in California costs almost $16, whereas the same type of license in Nevada costs $10. Commissioners also noted the increase in digital recreation as part of the decrease.

Jeff Parker, the south county commissioner, pitched in, “If hunting were easy they’d call it killing. If fishing we’re easy they’d call it catching.” He then suggested that those who couldn’t handle fishing’s delayed gratification go to Palm Springs.

Matt McClain director of Mammoth Lakes Recreation spoke during the public comment period and left after his remarks. He let the directors know that MLR was engaged in the sustainable recreation sector. This was a little bit of can-vassing for MLR. Also he talked about DWP’s dewatering and expressed a desire to work with the county to mitigate damage.

Parker thinks they’re using the water that used to go to ranchers to meet watering requirements on the Owens Valley Dry Lake.

“They’re just losing their shorts all around,” he said.

Cubensis headlines Saturday; MHS Jazz opens Sunday

By Benham

Cubensis returns to June Lake Jam Fest for the fourth straight year.

The band’s founder and lead guitarist Craig Marshall spoke to The Sheet on the phone Tuesday morning.

Along with Marshall, the band consists of guitarist Nate LaPointe, keyboardists Tom Ryan, bassist Larry Ryan, drummers Brad Rhodus and Ed Fletcher. There is also manager and producer John Murchison, a four man road crew, artist Darrin Brenner, and taper/archivist Wayne Stielau. Cubensis is a large family. Marshall loves it that way.

He founded the band in 1987, not out of love, but out of frustration that the Grateful Dead skipped southern California on tours. So, Marshall and friends started playing the Dead’s music to amuse themselves, Marshall said.

As a kid he taught himself to play guitar by listening to Grateful Dead LP’s at half speed.

To this day Marshall doesn’t read music. “Music theory?...What’s that? I can play everything by ear.”

The band played backyard parties and debuted at their first club in 1988.

Now, they play almost every weekend from San Diego to Santa Barbara. Last year in Hermosa Beach, they played in front of approximately seven thousand people.

“A few weeks ago I couldn’t see who was there. They certainly counted but were not a threat for stage fright.” Marshall said.

When they played at the Manhattan Beach Armory, the manager of the venue worried about his perfectly waxed floors getting scratched.

He was right to worry.

The audience scratched the floor, which is what audiences do, Marshall said. He likes it that way.

“We feed off energy from the crowd,” he said.

Marshall explained that the Dead’s music has a skeleton: the chords and lyrics. The band remains true to the skeleton and improvises during the extended jams. They reinterpret the music every time they play, keeping the experience fresh for musician and listener.

“It’s a challenge to create something new every time,” Marshall said.

He loves the improvisation, the reinterpreting, the jamming.

“If I were in a traditional band, I wouldn’t be able to do it,” Marshall said.

He met Jerry Garcia in a gift shop in the San Francisco airport. Marshall was on his way to see the Dead in Eugene, Oregon. Garcia was on his way, too - to play. Marshall told Garcia that he played in Cubensis and that they played The Grateful Dead’s music.

“So do I,” Garcia said.

They laughed.

Marshall asked technical questions. Garcia gave technical answers that were a little over Marshall's head. Then Marshall asked the $64,000 dollar question,” (As in 1964?): “How do you feel about us playing your music?” Garcia: “Go for it.” With the master’s blessing Cubensis continues to spread the love. They’ve introduced thousands to the Dead’s music. Marshall is proud of that. “It’s a pleasure and privilege to play their music,” he said.

He doesn’t plan to stop anytime soon.

“I’d have to drop dead on stage,” he said.

MHS Jazz Band

Mammoth High School’s jazz band will perform on Sunday morning at the Jam fest.

Their set will include traditional jazz standards as well as Aretha Franklin’s Respect and Van Morrison’s Moondance.

The band has four new members.

“I’ve played at Disneyland,” one of the rookies assured.

The veterans said last year was fun. One remembered that it was cold.

“I didn’t know how to play my trumpet last year,” admitted last year’s trumpet player.

At Wednesday’s rehearsal, a saxophonist alluded to Miles Davis. The band will open Sunday at 9 a.m. with either Davis or the Dead floating in their heads.

Why not throw a little 9/11 hyperbole into the mix? A Mammoth Lakes Tourism inquiry into alleged ethical lapses by Board member Brent Truax will be agendized and discussed in open session at MLT’s upcoming Board meeting to be held in Suite Z at the Minaret Mall in Mammoth on September 11.

Showtime is 1 p.m. The Sheet asked for and received a copy of the questions submitted in writing to Mr. Truax last week. The complete document sent by MLT Chair McGuire to Mr. Truax appears below with the specific questions italicized. You will then see the Sept. 4 response penned by Kenneth Luer, Mr. Truax’s attorney.

Finally, we include a copy of the section in the MLT bylaws related to removal of Board members. Note: Some small edits will be required to make it all fit.
SMHD CANDIDATES WEIGH IN

By Benham

Three weeks ago, The Sheet published an article about Southern Mono Healthcare District’s (SMHD) Board election, featuring the voices of two of the five candidates: Caroline Casey and Yuri Parisky.

Since then, The Sheet has talked to the other three candidates: Joanne Hunt, Grady Dutton and Ryan Wood.

Joanne Hunt was one of the nurses who started Mammoth Hospital in 1978. She took a fifty percent pay cut to work in Mammoth, because she wanted to raise her family here. She’s coming out of a one-and-a-half year retirement, because she believes the board needs a nurse. The board currently lacks nursing representation since Lynda Salcido left to join Mammoth’s Town Council.

Hunt has experience on boards, having served on the MUSD school board for twelve years. Also, she has experience in leadership within the Rotary and Women’s clubs. As a board member, she wants to listen and needs to recruit people who are committed to Mammoth long term. Her career in healthcare, she believes, gives her an understanding of the intricacies of a hospital and its services.

Ryan Wood is an incumbent, having served on the board since 2014. Wood practices law with his father Rick at Wood Law Group. Wood called his time on the board quite pleasant.

The learning curve as a new board member surprised him. He doesn’t want any of the candidates thinking that it’ll be a walk in the park.

He praised Mammoth Hospital’s CEO Gary Myers for creating a corporate culture with low employee turnover rates. (Myers will retire at the end of the year.) “There’s not the drama or problems that impact other healthcare districts,” he said.

Wood recognizes that the district needs to offer more and more effective behavioral and substance abuse services. He would like to see SMHD and Northern Inyo Healthcare District collaborate to regionalize healthcare. His ideal: all healthcare needs met locally, eliminating travel beyond Bishop.

Grady Dutton has been Mammoth’s Public Works Director since 2014. Dutton doesn’t have experience in the healthcare industry, which he sees as an asset.

“I would like to bring a somewhat different viewpoint and set of skills to the Board by taking advantage of my diverse experience.”

He wants to give back to the community—something every candidate in the election mentioned.

Regarding possible conflicts of interest with his job as Public Works Director, Dutton said, “I will continue to serve as Public Works Director – any potential conflicts will be quite manageable.”

Dutton identified behavioral health as the most pressing issue facing the Mono County.

“Whether or not you are aware of it, you have friends, neighbors, acquaintances and likely coworkers who are affected. These issues are often difficult to identify and can be nearly impossible to treat,” he said.

“I have not served on a hospital board. I have formally served on several homeowners associations, Little League and other recreation-related boards.”

Almost every candidate has mentioned the hospital’s need to improve mental and behavioral health services. In a 2016 report titled “Mammoth Hospital Community Health Needs Assessment”, a survey listed heavy drinking and mental health as the most important health issues facing the county. 1.8% of those surveyed mentioned suicide as an important health issue.

In another survey that asked “What three things should we focus on to improve the health of our community?” 27.2% of responses mentioned ‘Help people to find a Mental Health Counselor.”

The report suggested that the county refer patients to addiction specialists, hire a psychiatrist and “dedicate [a] caseworker to follow patients and ensure they are taking medications and following up with appointments.

The candidates have done the reading or just have a finger on the pulse.

There are two open seats. Voters can choose two candidates or only one if they feel inclined. The election takes place on November 6.

Five-year-old June Mitchell overheard her parents talking to friends about the horses injured at the Big Pine Saddle Club back in June of this year and the concern over the high cost of medical treatment for the horses facing their owners. She told her mother, Kim, that she was worried about the injured horses and she wanted to help.

June went home and made a special gift bag and placed her entire savings of $3.16 from her piggy bank in it. She then gave it to the Big Pine Saddle Club to be added to the reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person or persons who set fire to a truck on the property and savagely attacked several horses.

Thanks to the five-year-old’s donation, the reward now sits at $18,732.66.

In addition to the reward money, the Saddle Club’s online GoFundMe campaign has collected $7,945 toward its $10,000 goal to have electricity, security lighting and cameras installed to prevent future incidents. Donations are still being accepted.

June later had her picture taken with Saddle Club member, Margaret Hunter, who is also her neighbor. They are shown standing next to Choco, the most seriously injured horse. Choco required dozens to stitches to close the wounds he sustained, but according to its owner, Yvette Hanno-Rossi, “Choco’s wounds have healed well with a lot of tender love and care. He is the one shown on the reward posters.”

Kim Mitchell told The Sheet that her daughter June was born premature and that she and her husband had to spend many weeks away from home to be with her while she was in the hospital.

“Thanks to the generosity of the Ronald McDonald House and others,” said Kim, “my husband and I were able to be with her and we had a place to stay. Because of that experience we have tried to raise June to have a ‘generous heart.’”

The annual Ronald McDonald Walk for Kids, by the way, takes place next Saturday morning in Bishop at City Park.

June’s mom said that whenever June is asked what she wishes for when she blows out a birthday candle or throws a penny into a wishing well, she always responds with, “I want a horse.”

While June may not be getting a horse of her own any time soon, there are plenty of Saddle Club members who will likely be more than happy to let her share theirs.

After all, who can resist a little girl who not only loves horses, but has been shown to have a generous heart?

June Mitchell, 5, with neighbor Margaret Hunter and Choco, one of the horses injured during the June 2 attack at the Big Pine Saddle Club.
LADWP SPARKS MORE THAN CONTROVERSY
Crash drone on dewatered ranch land, causing small fire

On Thursday morning August 30 a drone flown by a contractor for the Los Angeles Department of Water and Power (LADWP) crashed, sparking a fire on ranchlands that LADWP has dewatered as part of a plan to export more water from the Eastern Sierra to the City of Los Angeles.

According to preliminary reports from the U.S. Bureau of Land Management’s and the Inyo National Forest Service’s Owens Valley Interagency Communications Center, the crash occurred at approximately 11:20 a.m. starting a fire near McGee Creek northwest of Crowley Lake. The fire continued for more than two hours, burning approximately 10 acres, before being contained at approximately 1:45 p.m.

The drone was flying above Los Angeles-owned lands in Long Valley that have historically been leased for ranching. According to Mono County (issuer of this press release), the purpose of the flight was to monitor the effects of LADWP’s dewatering on Bi-State Sage Grouse, a species proposed for listing under the federal Endangered Species Act. The helicopter-style drone was approximately nine feet long.

LADWP’s dewatering has browned and dried the landscape of southern Mono County. Earlier this year, Secretary of the California Natural Resources Agency, John Laird, warned LADWP that its actions and failure to perform the requisite environmental review could cause environmental impacts, specifically explaining that LADWP’s dewatering would “significantly increase the risk of wildfires, which would threaten nearby communities.” Yesterday, officials from the Long Valley Fire Protection District confirmed that the ranchlands where the fire occurred is extremely dry.

The removal of water from approximately 6,400 acres in Long Valley, which has been irrigated for at least the past 100 years, has resulted in the drying of vegetation and incursion of invasive plants which make the area more susceptible to ignition increase the threat of wildfire both to adjacent communities and public lands managed by the U.S. Bureau of Land Management. “I have lived in the Crowley Lake area since 1991, and I have never seen a fire in that area,” said Mono County Supervisor and former Long Valley Fire Protection District chief Fred Stump.

On August 15, Mono County filed litigation challenging the decision of the City of Los Angeles and LADWP to alter decades of water and land management policies by dewatering these ranchlands in Long and Little Round Valleys. The lands provide habitat for Bi-State Sage Grouse, enhance scenic, recreational and habitat values in the Eastern Sierra, and serve as pasturelands for agricultural operations which contribute to the Eastern Sierra economy.

The County’s lawsuit asserts that LADWP violated the California Environmental Quality Act (CEQA) by changing its land and water management practices without first analyzing the potential significant effects, including, ironically, the increased threat and risk of wildfire.

For more information and maps of the affected area, a copy of the County’s lawsuit against the City of Los Angeles and LADWP and comments on the issue, please visit: https://monocounty.ca.gov/cao/page/mono-supervisors-ask-ladwp-do-right-thing.

PAY MACK, NOT GRUDEN

By Hartley

By the time the Raiders reach Las Vegas, new Coach Jon Gruden will have destroyed the franchise. He removed one cornerstone this past week by trading away the best defensive player in the league, Khalil Mack.

Sure, there are times you let a player go. But Khalil Mack was their defense. He was the guy who pressured the passer so the lousy cornerbacks didn't look so lousy. And the guy who filled the gaps left by the sieve of a defensive line.

They received picks in return, but the only first round picks over the past few years you can name are QB David Carr and ... Khalil Mack.

The Raiders open against the Rams this week as 4.5 point home underdogs. But the Rams and lay the points like a rock star who they are in love with. Why go through all the motions and have to still pay his $3.5 million tender. Then they sign AJ McCarron. Only thing that saved them on that is Khalil Mack.

For the Raiders.

How many fantasy football teams are named ROLLIN WITH MAHOMIES? Too many. By the way, one of my fantasy teams is named Le'Veon A Prayer ... gotta change that now since he's holding out.

HBO Hard Knocks moment. Free agent WR Dez Bryant walks in the building for a free agent visit. Do they film him working out or talking about football or plays or schemes? Nope, he walks in the building like a rock star, wanders the building, visits the barber shop in the building, hugging and high fiving everyone. Goes on the team radio show. Sits with the coach and talks about how he just wants REALNESS from a coach and organization. Treated like a rock star who they are in love with. Why go through all the motions knowing you're not gonna pay him? The Browns will suck forever because their whole culture reeks of small-time ineptitude.

DE Aaron Donald of the Rams got a lot of money. Khalil Mack got a Brinks Truck full from the Bears. Course, given the modern salary cap era, you guessed it ... linebackers, outside LBs in particular. And the Steelers are sitting, three days before the season starts, with just three outside LBs on the whole roster. Better make a trade, since 2 of the 3 they kept couldn't even play for the Raiders.

The NFL needs to investigate how the Rams seemingly have NO salary cap. Seriously, they've been throwing down for everyone. It doesn't possibly seem legit. Buffalo Bills. They let Tyrod Taylor go. A valid NFL QB who they could have kept and let rookie Josh Allen learn and sit for a year behind. But they didn't want to pay him and benched him last year while they were a playoff contender. Then they sign AJ McCarron. Only thing that saved them on that is Gruden's dumbass trading for him at the 11th hour.

But the mystifying one. They can't pay the lousy cornerbacks. Sure, there are times you let a player go. But Khalil Mack was their defense. They can only do that when you have QBs that are on the hook for his rookie contract. And release him less than a month later and have to still pay his $3.5 million contract. Someone should be fired.

Funniest thing of the week. A bride we were exhausted, tired. "We also set up a go fund me. Only thing that saved them on that is Khalil Mack.

Worst part is ... this crazy girl is going to get married someday. This guy she was engaged to eventually said enough and walked away but some stupid dude is going to like that booty enough to marry her. And he will pay the $60,000 himself for the wedding.
